

Children’s Ministry meets World Cup Fervour

Children’s Ministry was a priority for Jesus... He made time to minister to children. With World Cup fervour about to hit England at a fantastic rate interest around sport at a national level is going to be as high as ever. This gives us an opportunity to engage with children in a relevant way through this gift of sport, games and play that impacts so many people in different ways.

Come along for an afternoon of training with Terry Williams who has been involved with ministering to Children throughout the world for over 30 years. We’ll be practically exploring this vital area of Christian ministry and being equipped for the task of sharing faith with children in the 21st century.

If you are involved with children’s ministry on some level this afternoon’s introduction to the area of children’s ministry is an ideal opportunity to grow in knowledge and skill. Best practise in children’s ministry will be applied to the area of Sports Ministry which will introduce you to opportunities to engage with the World Cup theme this summer. Resources and training on whole school days, extra-curricular material, collective worship and sports camps will be included as part of the afternoon.

Terry Williams

...trained and worked as a teacher in primary and secondary schools before joining the staff team of Scripture Union Queensland, Australia, where he has worked for 32 years as a specialist in children’s ministry. In 2008 Terry joined the SU International staff team for half of his time, helping to train and multiply trainers in more than 30 countries. His passion is to see children come to know Jesus and to experience ‘LIFE to the full’ that relationship with Jesus offers as well as supporting families in their primary role as part of faith formation. Terry is married to Margaret and they have three adult children and three grandchildren.
